State your mission
Are you studying engineering to create low-cost clean water systems, or studying music to enrich children’s lives in the foster care system? NGSC students choose a social mission in addition to their academic major. Your mission will drive your internships and experiences throughout the program.

Learn to lead
In addition to the courses required for your major, you will complete six courses throughout your time in the program that lay the foundation for leadership development, human-centered problem solving and community collaborations. By completing these courses, you will earn a Cross-Sector Leadership certificate to pair with your degree.

Gain cross-sector experience
You will complete a series of three internships in private, public, and nonprofit organizations. Internship placements can be designed around your mission, so you can experience the many stakeholders tackling the challenge you wish to solve.

Build trust with the military sector
Military and civilian leaders must work together on global and local humanitarian efforts, disaster relief and peacekeeping operations. Share leadership experiences with ROTC students, veterans and active military to build greater understanding of the military as a sector necessary to create solutions.

Build a network
You will help lead retreats, all-Corps events, speaker series, service projects, and team-building opportunities to develop a diverse network of 600 changemakers in fields outside of your major. You will also network with local and national leaders who value collaboration and cross-sector solutions.

Mission Team Engagement

All students are grouped into small teams by similar interest in a social issue. These mission teams engage in student-led exploration, research and solutions with community partners, university partners, and the public.

Mission team areas include:

- Education
- Access to Healthcare
- Immigration
- Equality & justice
- Renewable energy
- Homelessness
- Human rights

- Sustainability
- Water scarcity
- Youth development
- National security
- Animal cruelty
- Human trafficking
- Domestic violence

Public Service Academy Commitment Award

ASU ensures that all NGSC members receive base tuition coverage from the university. Each award is tailored to each individual financial aid package and is renewable for eight semesters as long as the student remains in good standing. Please visit our website for more information.
